Florida Resident? Use a Florida Attorney For Your Planning

Many Floridians have friends and family who practice law in other states. It can be tempting to turn to them for advice. But when it comes to something as important as your estate plan, it is always best to leave the heavy lifting to an experienced Florida estate planning attorney. Here's the story of someone who learned this the hard way.

New Rule Protects Retirement Savers

Good news for retirement savers: After 14 years of discussion, the Department of Labor just issued a final rule that requires retirement savings advisors to act as fiduciaries. The new rule beefs up your protections from conflicts of interest, and mandates that your advisor put your best interests above his/her own.
